Nurturing expertise

As part of the evolving profession of internal auditors there is a responsibility for practitioners to build upon current skills and cultivate new techniques in order to develop teams and the profession as a whole. At the Chartered IIA we have tailored training, qualifications and development courses with the intention to nurture everyday practices of the internal audit function.

Chartered IIA's Global Competency Framework

Members of the Chartered IIA are required to complete 40 CPE points every year to maintain their professionalism. Attending a training course is an effective and motivating way to build these points. Developing your skillset can support positive change and further your career goals.

IIA Certificate in Internal Audit and Business Risk

IIA Certificate in Internal Audit and Business Risk

The IIA Certificate is a practical, accredited modular course that you can tailor to your needs. If you're new to internal audit, need a refresher, or you work in a related role, such as compliance, it will give you a thorough grounding in the practice and principles of audit, governance, risk and assurance. The Certificate can be completed in one year and leads to the IACert designation.

Studying for the IIA Certificate

The IIA Certificate is made up of five individual awards, each covering a key area of internal audit. You will study two core and two optional awards of your choice.

Core IIA Awards

See page

IIA Award in corporate governance and risk management	8
IIA Award in the internal audit planning and assurance framework	8

Optional IIA Awards

IIA Award in the effective delivery of audit and assurance	8
IIA Award in interpersonal skills for audit and assurance	9
IIA Award in compliance audit and assurance	9

What's involved

Each award comprises of a 30-hour learning programme which includes a two-day training course as well as self-study.

You will need to set objectives and complete some reading before attending each course.

For each award you will need to submit a personal development log.

There are no exams to sit and the IIA Certificate is not graded. You will be assessed through personal development logs and your professional experience record.

Data risks, security and GDPR in a hybrid working world

In today's 'big data' world cyber criminals will target any business regardless of size. The rapid pace of technological change and globalisation have profoundly transformed the scale and way in which personal data is collected, accessed, used and transferred. The global spike in remote work in 2020 increased security challenges as employees remotely accessed company networks, files, and data — but the work landscape is shifting again. Now, many businesses are implementing a hybrid work model, allowing employees to work both in the office and remotely offering a new set of challenges.

Strategy and leadership

Although a queen bee leads her colony all year round, the hive has to work the hardest during the summer months to be at maximum strength ahead of winter.

Strategy and leadership

Senior internal auditors must work ever more closely with business leaders, audit committee members, peers and audit teams. This requires strong stakeholder management and influencing skills. You also need the ability to think strategically, plan efficiently, and be able to motivate and lead a team.

Heads of internal audit – induction masterclass

What does it take to be a successful HIA? What types of transition into the HIA role are there and what are the pitfalls and elephant traps to avoid? We will look at best practice GRC, assurance co-ordination, the audit planning process to ensure IA adds value and is properly resourced. We will also look at some key lean/agile points to drive IA team productivity; the challenges managing and motivating the IA team, as well as some of the key political factors to be aware of.

This course is for heads of internal audit and senior audit managers hoping to get the HIA role.

We know what the IIA standards say, but how do we put these into practice, so that we can pass an EQA? Understand the common blind-spots around EQAs and the practical things you can do to ensure you are on top of things, without being burdened by excessive bureaucracy. We will discuss “war stories” around selecting and managing EQA providers and also how best to manage the EQA process. As we will discover, it’s not by accident that EQAs can trigger the outsourcing of the IA team or a change in the HIA.

This course is for heads of internal audit and audit managers and those in an IA quality role.

Successful influencing and political savvy strategies for heads of internal audit

Beyond technical skills, managing stakeholders and dealing with office politics is an essential part of what it takes to be effective as a head of internal audit. We will examine key dilemmas facing heads of internal audit, who are often pulled in different directions by different stakeholders. We will also look at different styles of influencing and how to influence without authority by managing through the hamburger model of task/process and climate. We will also reframe common misunderstandings about politics and how to manage through different agendas; sharing “war stories” to develop more refined skills and strategies.

Successful influencing strategies for audit managers

Today's internal audit managers need to work closely with business leaders and other colleagues in the first and second lines. This requires an understanding of the psychology of auditing and the ways to optimise the internal audit role, and to “read between the lines” and influence without authority. It is also key to manage staff (increasingly remotely) balancing between leading, support and challenge. We will share practical experiences and good practice to stretch managers to attain the next level.

Tools and techniques

Internal audit is a fast-paced profession. It is essential to keep up to date with the latest tools, techniques and methodology to meet the demands of the job. Our courses will give you practical guidance on a range of topics we know matter.

Assurance mapping and co-ordination

We are now required to ensure our work is co-ordinated with others and we have a consistent process for determining how much to rely on them. Learn how to measure other assurances (in the first and second lines) and best practices for audit planning leveraging such information. We will also cover basic assurance mapping techniques to identify gaps and overlaps in the assurance jigsaw (a common problem area revealed by EQAs). Learn through numerous practical case studies how to keep assurance mapping work practical and focussed and how to align insights to drive improved GRC and a better value adding role for IA.

Managing internal audit's strategic and operational risks

Today's chief audit executives and internal audit managers provide valued, independent and objective assurance and advice to stakeholders across their organisations on governance, risk management and control. But how effective are you at managing your own strategic and operational risks? Have you ever struggled to deliver your annual plan, manage a key stakeholder relationship or hold on to a valued and highly skilled team member who is being headhunted by a competitor? In short, do we practice effective risk management ourselves, each time, every time?

This master class focuses on the diverse strategic and operational risks internal audit leaders face, and demonstrates how you can begin to turn threats into opportunities, avoid perfect storms and deliver effective, insightful assurance and advisory services to your key stakeholders. This session will help you improve your own - and your team's - delivery, performance and reputation.

We negotiate every day – for instance, when we purchase services from suppliers, or even when we agree what film to watch on television. We also negotiate in the workplace, whether we realise it or not – for example, when we book our holiday or agree a pay rise. But no negotiation process is worthwhile unless the outcomes and agreements are seen through.

As an internal auditor you negotiate throughout the engagement process. In this course we determine what negotiation is and provide frameworks and techniques for carrying out effective negotiations ultimately achieving joint outcomes that all parties will make happen.

Quality in internal audit

Building in quality into internal audit serves two main purposes. First, it means internal audit is delivering a reliable and focused service for the organisation. Second, being regarded as delivering a quality service improves internal audit's standing in the organisation. This course explores what quality means for internal audit, and how an internal audit function might embed quality in its systems and processes.

Financial risk management

This course will help equip auditors to ask the right questions of finance and non-finance professionals to provide assurance over the capability and capacity of organisations to manage this risk.

Since the 2008 financial crisis organisations have operated in an increasingly turbulent and volatile operating environment. No sector has been insulated from this with high profile failures of banks, FTSE listed organisations and public sector bodies. Financial volatility is likely to continue over the years to come as countries continue to battle the pandemic and Government and personal debt levels unseen since World War II have to begin to be repaid.

Financial resilience

This course will examine some of the key variables that have led to corporate failures underpinned by real life case studies. Auditors will leave this course having a greater understanding for the indicators of financial distress and the questions to ask when they are identified.

In the second of the financial resilience series this standalone short course will provide internal auditors with an insight into some key high profile corporate failures over the last decade and what they can teach us as modern auditors in a continually volatile financial environment across all sectors.

Surviving in a post-pandemic world

As the world begins to emerge from the pandemic which has rocked the world's economic, financial and sociological structures we as a profession must begin to ask ourselves what risks does this new environment pose and more importantly are we asking the right questions of management to provide assurance over these risks.

This course will focus on the short-term risks that organisations will be grappling with and finish with an overview of some of the longer term or structural risks that we will all have to address as the years progress.
